Developer O'Connor Capital hosted a private event at 200 East 62nd St to unveil the extensive rock n' roll memorabilia collection of Craig Kallman, the CEO of Atlantic Records, and Rob Roth, a noted Broadway director. The exhibition, which featured vintage collector's posters for such legends as David Bowie, the Rolling Stones, Queen and Led Zeppelin, was on display in two separate residences, both available for purchase. Kallman, who lent his collection for this event, also announced that he purchased a residence at 200 East 62nd Street. Reimagined by architecture and design firm Messana O'Rorke, 200 East 62nd Street is a new luxury condominium conversion on the Upper East Side with 115 residences, many of which are available for immediate occupancy.
